Cheyenne County Receives First COVID-19 Vaccine

The Cheyenne County Hospital received their first doses of COVID-19 vaccine today and will be given to members of our frontline healthcare team. “This will be the first of more to come, to protect us from this intrusive virus and to end this pandemic,” according to Rance Ramsey, CEO of the Cheyenne County Hospital.

“It is a sigh of relief to see a “light at the end of the tunnel” to end this pandemic. For me and others, this is an eventful day because we know how tirelessly and passionate our team has worked the past nine months to develop plans and initiatives to care and protect our patients, team, and community,” said Ramsey.

Today gives us great hope and encouragement as we begin the vaccine administration journey to end this virus pandemic. Please continue to: wash your hands; use hand sanitizer; cough into your sleeve or your arm; stay home when you are sick; and social distance. Please wear a mask until the COVID-19 vaccine is fully distributed.
